Friends of the Osa (FOO) is a nonprofit conservation organization committed to the preservation of the Osa Peninsula's globally significant biodiversity, by ensuring the maintenance, restoration and long-term viability of the ecosystems on and around the Osa Peninsula. FOO was founded in 2003 and has offices in Washington, DC and Puerto Jiménez, Costa Rica. Our team consists of dedicated Costa Rican and international biologists conducting scientific research, environmental educators and land conservation managers. While we maintain a small office in Puerto Jiménez, our center of operations is the Osa Biodiversity Center (OBC). The center provides accommodation and lab facilities for researchers, field courses, and training workshops. Our extensive trail network covers diverse ecosystems including primary and secondary rainforest, coastal habitats and numerous freshwater resources.

We provide comfortable shared accommodation in our three cabins. Each cabin has three bedrooms that accommodate four people each, a shared bathroom and shower, and a breezeway that can be set up for work or relaxation. In addition to the cabins, the research center is also equipped with a wet lab, reference library and dining hall. Limited access to wireless internet is included.

*F*inca Exotica is a lodge with an organic farm and botanical garden and forms part of the Saimiri Wildlife Refuge in Carate. The key aim and objective of Finca Exotica is to create a sustainable environment for healthy living.

This is the perfect place for volunteers interested in sustainable architecture, sustainable agriculture, tropical fruits and plants. Finca Exotica offers a chilled out and relaxed environment for volunteers.

Small or large locally hand crafted jungle tents for 2 people with either a queen or 2 twin beds that are placed on platforms to keep you dry. The tents are spaciouly spread across the garden providing you the opportunity to immerse yourself in nature. Although some have a private outdoor shower, you may be sharing a communal bathhouse or stay in one of the more plush cabins with a private bathroom.

*I*SEAMI is a foundation aimed at promoting a liberal educational philosophy of living sustainably with the environment. We also seek to support research and responsible eco-tourist development, while conserving land to serve as a biological corridor for the wildlife of the Carate-Corcovado region.

This establishment provides clean and comfortable accommodation for volunteers in a calm and stress-free environment filled with the soothing sounds of the jungle.

ISEAMI offers spacious cabins that comfortably accommodate up to four people. Each cabin comes with a twin bed, a bunk bed, electricity, bathrooms equipped with private shower and balcony. In addition, bunkhouse lodging is available for discounted price.

*L*ookout Inn Lodge is nestled in the hillside along the coast overlooking the Pacific Ocean and Corcovado National Park, offering comfortable eco-friendly lodgings to all their guests.

This is a well established lodge and the perfect place for volunteers who wish to enjoy a touch of luxury outside of working hours.

The Lookout Inn Lodge is in the town of Carate on the Osa Peninsula, ideally situated to offer comfortable eco-friendly accommodations to the traveler visiting this remote part of Costa Rica. This is the Primary Entry Point to Corcovado National Park which is considered one of the world's great wildlife reserves. A guided tour into the park is an unforgettable experience.

Benito's Jungle Tent Camp is exactly what its name suggests. It is a small, family-run business that is finding its feet. Some sites are already built while others are still under construction.

This is the perfect place for volunteers interested in immersing themselves into Cost Rican culture as it is the closest offering we have to a home stay.

Small tents on platforms offering shelter from the elements, with mattresses for comfort.
